Issue #18 • Winter 2017

Women's Committee Co-Chair

Women's Committee Co-Chair

This edition of the Women's Connection features former Corporate Associate Lauren Ezrol Klein (STB '91-'96), who was appointed Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Corporate Secretary of Time Inc. last year. We hope you'll enjoy Lauren's thoughts on how the news and media industry is changing, and the impact of those developments on her work at Time.

Jennifer Levitt

Here at Simpson Thacher, we have plenty of news of our own to report. First, we are delighted to welcome our incoming women partners, Jennifer ("Jen") J. Levitt and Mary B. Touchstone, both of whom were elected as members of the Firm effective January 1, 2018. Jen represents financial sponsors and investment banks in connection with debt financings for private equity, real estate, infrastructure, debt and other investment funds. Mary is the Head of the Firm's Fund Finance Practice and represents financial sponsors in a wide variety of complicated financings designed to provide fund-level leverage to facilitate and support investment activities.

Mary Touchstone

We are also pleased to announce that three women associates have been elevated to Counsel, effective January 1, 2018: Amanda McGovern (Private Funds, New York); Uma Sud (Capital Markets, London); and Lia Toback (Capital Markets, New York).

In recognition of the Firm's commitment to hiring and promoting outstanding women lawyers, Simpson Thacher has received a number of honors this past year:

- In June 2017, the Women in Law Empowerment Forum ("WILEF") awarded Simpson Thacher with the prestigious Gold Standard Certification for the sixth time. Qualifying for the WILEF gold standard requires meeting rigorous criteria with respect to the percentage of women equity partners and the number of women involved in firm governance and compensation determinations, among other factors.
- Also in June 2017, Yale Law Women named Simpson Thacher one of the year's Top Ten Family Friendly Firms. This ranking reflects gender equity indicators such as partnership promotions and firm leadership positions.
- In July 2017, The American Lawyer included Simpson Thacher on its "A-List," which takes into account factors such as the percentage of women in the equity partnership.

Women partners continue to rise to the highest levels of Firm leadership at Simpson Thacher. Three women partners – Jennifer L. Hobbs, Lynn K. Neuner and Kathryn K. Sudol – are members of the Firm’s Executive Committee. Lynn also serves as one of Simpson Thacher’s two Administrative Partners. In addition, women partners are Co-Chairs of numerous important Firm committees, including the Finance (Alexandra Kaplan), Opinion (Lesley Peng), New Partners (Roxane F. Reardon), Counsel/Senior Counsel (Marni J. Lerner), Diversity (Karen Hsu Kelley), Recruiting (Krista Miniutti), Attorney Development (Olga Gutman), Associates (Sinead O’Shea) and Personnel (Sinead O’Shea) Committees.

On the Women’s Committee, we have had a changing of the guard. Maripat Alpuche has stepped down as Co-Chair after several years of dedicated leadership, and Caroline B. Gottschalk has taken her place. We are extraordinarily grateful to Maripat for her years of advocacy and mentorship on the Women’s Committee.

While we will miss Maripat, we are excited to welcome Caroline, who has already provided insightful new perspectives on our initiatives. Caroline concentrates her practice on mergers and acquisitions and strategic corporate advice for private equity, strategic and investment banking clients. Her recent representations include advising Centerbridge Partners in its $1.26 billion acquisition of Syncsort and Vision Solutions, as well as its acquisition of TriMark USA; and Vista Equity Partners in its $6.5 billion acquisition of Solera Holdings.

We wish you and yours a wonderful Thanksgiving and the happiest of holiday seasons.

Lauren Ezrol Klein:

A View from the Top at Time Inc.

Lauren Ezrol Klein

Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Corporate Secretary of Time Inc.

Lauren Ezrol Klein (STB '91-'96) still remembers the day the phone rang with news of an in-house position at Time Inc. As an avid reader of Time and People magazines, and a voracious consumer of pop culture, Lauren knew the role would be a perfect fit. Her instincts proved spot-on. Two decades later, Lauren is still at Time — and she now heads the company's legal department as Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Corporate Secretary.

Even after years and years at the company, Lauren's enthusiasm for Time still remains as fresh as ever. She explains that the company delivers "premium, high-quality journalism" that "delights, informs, and drives the conversation in ways that make a difference." The company has a diverse set of influential iconic brands that cover virtually every interest and passion, including Time, People, Sports Illustrated, Fortune, InStyle, Real Simple, Travel + Leisure, Food & Wine, and Cooking Light, to name a few. She notes that Time's trusted content is especially important in the current era, where consumers are often inundated by unreliable stories and soundbyte-style news. In Lauren's view, Time's vibrant stories shape the national discourse in a powerful way.

One of the most interesting aspects of Lauren's position is her role on the executive management team, as well as her work with the company's board of directors. She has a seat at the table during high-level strategy discussions concerning the shape and direction of Time's business, giving her a unique vantage point on the company's operations at a time when the news and media industry is rapidly changing in significant ways.

Long-gone are the days when readers relied on print magazines and newspapers as their primary news sources. Now that people are "consuming their content" in many different formats, Lauren explains that Time has "reinvented itself" to stay ahead of the curve. The company was once a traditional print media business, but Time is now a multi-platform consumer media company that delivers content through a variety of dynamic platforms, engaging more than 200 million consumers globally each month. In addition to its print and digital magazine business, the company is expanding in new growth areas, such as digital video, television, licensing, paid products and services, and celebrated live events, such as the TIME 100, FORTUNE Most Powerful Women, PEOPLE's Sexiest Man Alive, and the FOOD & WINE Classic in Aspen.

For Lauren, Time's changing business model has made the company an incredibly exciting place to work. Each day brings novel business issues and new challenges. The legal end of the business transformation is just as cutting-edge, with the legal team grappling with complex issues in social media, data targeting, digital marketing and virtual reality. As the company embarks on new initiatives and partnerships at a rapid pace, the legal team is constantly developing new structures and agreements and updating public disclosures. Time's ever-evolving business environment demands a level of creativity and responsiveness from the legal team that Lauren finds energizing.

Handling business transitions is one of Lauren's fortes. In 2014, she played an integral role when Time was spun off by Time Warner

At Simpson Thacher, "I learned to think through the issues on a lot of different

into an independent public company. She recalls the excitement of breakneck deadlines for getting the complicated deal done and putting in place the necessary infrastructure for establishing Time as a public company. Her hard work and dedication did not go unnoticed. On August 10, 2016, Time elevated Lauren to her current position as Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Corporate Secretary.

One of the things Lauren loves most about working at Time is that many of her colleagues at the company — including the Chief Operating Officer and Chief Financial Officer — are also women. She credits the egalitarian approach of Rich Battista, Time Inc.'s CEO, for the number of women in Time's leadership ranks. She observes that “culturally,” it really makes a difference to be surrounded by so many high-quality women.

The “supportive, collaborative environment” at Time reminds Lauren of her days at Simpson Thacher. She still remembers the training she received as a corporate associate: “I learned to think through the issues on a lot of different levels,” she explains. This analytical approach continues to have a profound impact on the way she thinks and works to this day.

For lawyers looking to follow in her footsteps, Lauren has a few words of wisdom. “Be open-minded and ask a lot of questions,” she advises. And always push yourself to “work outside of your comfort zone.”
