UPDATE: Federal Reserve’s Paycheck Protection Program Lending Facility and Federal Home Loan Bank Advances Accepting Paycheck Protection Program Loans as Collateral

April 27, 2020

On April 16, 2020, the Federal Reserve announced that the Paycheck Protection Program Lending Facility (the “PPPLF”) commenced operations. Under the PPPLF, which was initially announced on April 9, 2020, Federal Reserve Banks will lend to depository institutions that originate Paycheck Protection Program (“PPP”) loans on a non-recourse basis, taking the PPP loans as collateral. On April 23, 2020, the Federal Reserve announced that it is working to expand access to the PPPLF for additional SBA-qualified lenders—including non-depository institution lenders, such as some Community Development Financial Institutions—as soon as possible.<sup>1</sup> The Federal Reserve is extending the PPPLF under its emergency lending authority under section 13(3) of the Federal Reserve Act and the facility is intended to facilitate lending to small businesses under the Paycheck Protection Program. The Federal Reserve also released the relevant documentation for banks seeking to access the PPPLF<sup>2</sup> and posted a new set of FAQs.<sup>3</sup> A summary of the PPPLF key terms is available here. On April 23, 2020, the Federal Housing Finance Agency (“FHFA”) announced that PPP loans are also allowable collateral for purposes of securing Federal Home Loan Bank (“FHLBank”) advances.<sup>4</sup>

PPPLF Mechanics

BORROWER ELIGIBILITY

A borrower<sup>5</sup> applying to the PPPLF must (1) execute a PPPLF letter agreement and (2) certify that it is not insolvent and cannot otherwise secure adequate credit, in the forms available on the Federal Reserve’s PPPLF website.<sup>6</sup> If the borrower does not already have access to the Federal Reserve’s discount window, it must deliver certified copies of authorizing resolutions in the form available on the PPPLF website.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>2</sup> All documents, along with samples of each document and guides for completing them, can be found at the Federal Reserve’s PPPLF site (managed by the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis): <https://www.frbdiscountwindow.org/generalpages/emergency%20credit%202020>.

<sup>5</sup> At this time, the PPPLF is only available to depository institutions (e.g., commercial banks, savings and loan associations or credit unions), but the Federal Reserve is working to expand eligibility to PPP lenders that are not depository institutions in the near future.

A borrower that is a PPP lender does not need to have a master account at a Federal Reserve Bank in order to obtain an extension of credit under the PPPLF. If a borrower does not have a master account, however, the borrower needs to have a correspondent relationship with an institution that does have a master account into which the proceeds of PPPLF extensions of credit are credited and repaid. A non-accountholder borrower (that has not already designated a correspondent for discount window purposes) and its correspondent will need to execute the relevant documentation required by the Reserve Bank extending PPPLF credit to the borrower. A borrower that has an existing correspondent relationship for discount window purposes must use that same correspondent relationship for extensions of credit under the PPPLF.

POSTING COLLATERAL, REQUESTING ADVANCES AND USE OF PROCEEDS

To pledge PPP loans as collateral and request an advance under the PPPLF, a borrower must assemble all of the PPP loans (which must have an SBA loan number) into separate pools grouped by maturity date<sup>8</sup> and, for each pool, submit a separate collateral transmittal form and a listing of individual loans for each pledged loan pool by email to its local Federal Reserve Bank.<sup>9</sup> Both the transmittal form and a template for the loan listing are available on the PPPLF website. The form and loan listing must be submitted by an authorized individual, as named in the borrower’s letter agreement mentioned above.

Proceeds of a PPPLF extension of credit will generally be available on the business day following the submission date. There are no restrictions on a borrower’s use of proceeds, as the Federal Reserve’s sole stated purpose of the PPPLF is to bolster the effectiveness of the PPP by providing liquidity against PPP loan collateral. Information on PPPLF extensions of credit will be disclosed periodically to the public as required by section 13(3) of the Federal Reserve Act.

Notable Terms

- Lowered Standard for Lack of Adequate Credit Accommodations: The Federal Reserve is restricted under 13(3) to only lend to borrowers that are not insolvent and that cannot obtain adequate credit accommodations from other banks. Notably, for this 13(3) facility, borrowers “need not establish <sup>7</sup> Note that a borrower is not required to establish ongoing access to the discount window to participate in the PPPLF, but if it would like to, it must submit the other standard documents required by Operating Circular No 10 (Lending), a Letter of Agreement and a Certificate attaching copies of the institution’s organizational documents: <https://www.frbservices.org/assets/resources/rules-regulations/071613-operating-circular-10.pdf>.

<sup>8</sup> A single extension of credit will be made for PPP loans with the same maturity date. As such, a PPPLF borrower should ensure that it simultaneously pledges all PPP loans with the same maturity date.

<sup>9</sup> For each request of PPPLF credit and pool of PPPLF collateral, a separate collateral transmittal form and individual loan listing must be submitted in its own email. Federal Reserve Discount Window, <https://www.frbdiscountwindow.org/pages/select-your-district>. E.g., New York’s PPPLF Email is ppplfcredit@ny.frb.org and California’s is ppplfcredit@sf.frb.org.

that credit is unavailable, rather that credit accommodations may be available, but at prices or on conditions that are inconsistent with a normal, well-functioning market.” This clarifying language should facilitate borrowers’ ability to make the lack-of-adequate-credit certification and more readily access the PPPLF. We may expect to see a similar lack-of-adequate-credit certification reflected in the Federal Reserve’s other liquidity facilities.

- PPP-Eligible Loans: Even though the SBA clarified in its interim rule of April 2<sup>10</sup> that lenders are held harmless for borrower certifications, a borrower under the PPPLF must represent, warrant and covenant that, among other things, each loan pledged as collateral is a “covered 7(a) loan” under the terms of the PPP and that it complies “with all requirements of the PPP, including without limitation any rules or guidance issued by the SBA implementing the PPP, and any requirements set forth in any agreement the Borrower is required to execute by the SBA in connection with the PPP.”
- Zero Capital Requirements: PPPLF extensions of credit are excluded from a borrower’s total leverage exposure, average total consolidated assets, advanced approaches total risk-weighted assets, and standardized total risk-weighted assets. PPP loans receive a zero percent risk weight for purposes of risk-based capital rules; however, only PPP loans that are pledged to secure PPPLF extensions of credit (and not those PPP loans pledged to secure primary credit funding) may be excluded from leverage ratio calculations.
- Secondary Market Purchases Not Eligible: If a borrower purchases an interest in a PPP loan in the secondary market, it cannot pledge that interest as collateral for a PPPLF extension of credit; only the borrower that originated the PPP loan may pledge it to the PPPLF. Relatedly, if a PPPLF borrower later decides it wants to sell a PPP loan in the secondary market, it must notify its lending Reserve Bank that it is requesting to prepay a PPPLF extension of credit, and must pay its Reserve Bank the full amount of the outstanding balance of the PPP loan that the borrower wishes to sell into the secondary market.

On April 17, the Federal Reserve announced<sup>11</sup> that it would temporarily modify its insider lending restrictions to bolster the effectiveness of the PPPLF, in keeping with the SBA’s recent modification of its insider lending restrictions. Normally, both the Federal Reserve and the SBA limit the types and quantity of loans that bank directors, shareholders, officers and businesses can receive from their banks. However, on April 14, the SBA loosened these restrictions, stating they would not prevent an otherwise eligible business owned by an outside director or holder of a less than 30% equity interest in a PPP lender from obtaining a PPP loan from the PPP lender on whose board the equity owner holds an interest so long as (1) the business follows the same process as any other customer of the lender and (2) the outside director or holder is not also an officer or key employee of the

PPP lender or the authorizing official that approves the loan.<sup>12</sup> Three days later, the Federal Reserve followed suit.<sup>13</sup>

FHLBank Advances

In guidance released on April 23, 2020, the FHFA confirmed that PPP loans are allowable collateral for purposes of securing FHLBank advances under certain conditions. FHLBank advances are a credit product offered by FHLBanks to provide members with liquidity. These advances serve as a funding source for a variety of mortgage products and help members originate mortgages. In order to be allowable collateral, PPP loans must meet a series of FHFA-established conditions relating to (i) the financial condition of the member and (ii) discounts, caps, and dollar limits.

MEMBER-RELATED CONDITIONS

- Members must have a CAMELS rating of “3” or better, or a member credit rating in the top 60 percent, or top three quintiles, of the FHLBank’s member rating system, e.g., 6 out of 10 or 3 out of 5, using the lower (more severe) credit risk rating.
- If a member is subsequently downgraded after pledging PPP collateral to the FHLBank, the member is not required to replace the PPP collateral, but such collateral will be subject to other limitations.
- In the event the member does not immediately replace the PPP collateral with other eligible collateral, the FHLBank must take possession of the PPP collateral and implement higher haircuts based on the rating of the member. If the member is downgraded to a CAMELS rating of “4” or a rating under the FHLBank’s rating system in the fourth quintile (greater than 60 percent to 80 percent), the FHLBank must implement a 60 percent haircut. If the member is downgraded to a CAMELS rating of “5” or a rating under the FHLBank’s rating system in the lowest quintile (greater than 80 percent to 100 percent), the FHLBank must implement a 90 percent haircut.

DISCOUNTS, CAPS, AND DOLLAR LIMITS

- At a minimum, the FHLBanks shall have a collateral discount of at least 10 percent that is applied to no more than 100 percent of the unpaid principal balance (“UPB”), i.e., PPP loans with a market value above 100 percent of the UPB are capped at the UPB.
- The FHLBank shall establish a 20 percent cap on the amount that PPP loans can constitute of a member’s lendable pledged collateral, i.e., after haircuts and market valuations.
- Finally, the FHLBank shall limit the dollar amount of PPP loans that a single member may pledge to no more than $5 billion in lendable collateral.
